Local man new produce director

A past president of the Brampton Board of Trade has been appointed a director of the organization that promotes eating Ontario-grown produce.

Charles Waud was appointed this week to the Ontario Produce Marketing Association (OPMA) board. He will join other directors in their job overseeing and managing the association. The OPMA is a non-profit organization that promotes eating fresh Ontario-grown fruit and vegetables. The OPMA also offers specialized industry services to its members, from produce inspections to business-building opportunities.

Waud is the president of WaudWare Incorporated, a software development company specializing in software for business. He is currently past president of the Brampton Board of Trade.

Charles

I feel there is no better person to do this job. I have met Charles and spoken to him. He is very approachable, he listens, talks about the subject and gives his honest opinion. His wife and family are GREAT Brampton people.
