WaudWare and Nix86 announce partnership to provide best in class mobile phone ordering for all distributors who use PICS software.

Technology partnership drives food distribution to mobile phones.

May 5, 2017 – WaudWare Incorporated, creators of Produce Inventory Control System (PICS) software, and Nix86, producer of best in class mobile phone ordering platforms for the foodservice industry have announced their recent partnership to provide PICS customers with a fully integrated turnkey solution. This solution will allow restaurants and other food service industry outlets the ability to place orders directly from their mobile phones using an app. Here's how it works:

“We are thrilled to be able to offer this unique solution to our customer base,” said F. Charles Waud, President of WaudWare. “The food service industry is going mobile. Fresh produce wholesalers, distributors, packers, and distributors need - and now have - the ability to put an effective tool for selling perishable produce right into their customers' hands.”

Nix86 will provide PICS users with a simple yet powerful app to allow ordering and receiving of product right from their mobile phone. Their customers will see the app of their favorite suppliers branded with the supplier's logo that is searchable under the supplier's name, and downloadable in the app store.

“By leveraging the powerful Nix86 phone app, PICS is offering its customers an inexpensive path to create a powerful competitive advantage and additional customer loyalty” said Alex Hardy, Founder of Nix86.

PICS customers are now able to enroll in the program.
